The largest floodplain on the planet is undoubtedly another of Brazil's main nature destinations. The Pantanal is home to incredible biodiversity, a harmonious combination of water, land, native flora and fauna, and the Pantanal people. Visiting this destination is an adventure, from hiking trails, 4x4 road trips, motorized canoes, or night safaris, visitors will be enchanted by the immense diversity that presents itself at every turn. For bird and wildlife watchers, it is undoubtedly a perfect destination, as it has the highest concentration of wildlife in Brazil, where hundreds of species can be observed just a few meters away from the viewer, especially the famous caimans (jacarés) and the huge capybaras that take over the banks of rivers and wetlands.

Birds of all sizes and colors fly across the Pantanal sky at different times of the day, from white herons to colorful red and blue macaws, including the symbol of the Pantanal, the Tuiuiu. Accommodation here is in ranches and lodges with full board, where visitors have the opportunity to enjoy local cuisine, especially fish dishes.
